I. Most Popular Speaking Topics

- 1. Leadership is Personal. Many of us admire great leaders but we find it hard to assess what makes them successful and inspirational. Today's effective leaders demonstrate vision and strength as well as humility and compassion. Increasingly, executive presence is being recognized as a key component to successful leadership. At this session, we will unpack the research on executive presence and delve into the three reported anchors that create a successful leader – gravitas, communication and appearance. We will explore how to command a room while also weaving your personal life into your leadership style and showing a vulnerability necessary to engender confidence from colleagues and clients. Through interactive exploration, participants will uncover the mystery of executive presence and begin building both the awareness and the skills to get there.
- 2. Effective Public Speaking Skills (for the Non-Public Speaker). Fear of public speaking is the number one fear that people have and it affects up to 75% of the population. Are you among them? If you are, if you have a fear of failure, embarrassment, inadequacy, or something else, it's real and it's holding you back. Regardless of your seniority level, it is interfering with your ability to project confidence, communicate with a client or colleague, participate or run a meeting, win someone's trust, command a room, or present as a speaker. At this session, we will explore how to overcome your public speaking fears by learning the key skills you need to you become an effective public speaker. Through interactive exercises, feedback and concrete strategies, you will learn how to gain the confidence you need to convey the messages and impressions that you need to succeed.
- 3. Blueprinting for Success: Developing Plans for Success in Sponsorship, Self-Advocacy, Networking & Leadership. In today's competitive workplace, it is no longer enough to be a top-notch professional. What are the intangibles that differentiate those professionals who thrive and those who wither? During this session, attendees will discover four challenging areas where professionals should focus. These include: 1. Sponsorship and Strategic Alliances; 2. Self-Advocacy; 3. Networking; and, 4. Leadership and Executive Presence. After gaining an understanding of the challenges, attendees will learn tangible steps to better navigate their way. Attendees will leave this event, armed with feedback and inspiration, to develop the skill sets they need to gain the success and status they want.
- 4. Strategic Networking & Making Your Ask a Give. Many feel that their network has gone stale or they've exhausted their networking efforts or they haven't had the networking success that they want. Others may believe they are great at building relationships but when it comes time to make an "Ask" -- whatever that Ask may be -- they often fall short. Not being able to ask for that opportunity or introduction, or ask to represent a client, go on a pitch or be considered for a promotion, leadership role or increased compensation, can significantly impede your success. At this session, you will learn how to systematically mine your network and unearth contacts through a web of connections you had no idea you could reach. You will also learn how to master the art of the Ask. The trick? Listen and get to know a person's needs, interests and challenges. Rather than frame your Ask as a favor, you will learn how you can be a resource. You will leave this session armed with action steps and inspiration to tap into your network and provide value while learning to Ask for what will propel yours and your contacts' careers forward.
- 5. Striking the Self-Promotion Balance: Demonstrating your Value without being the Obnoxious Person in the Room. How do you find that perfect balance between effectively self-promoting while not being that obnoxious person in the room? Whether you are self-promoting for a leadership opportunity, to get credit for a client matter, to win a pitch or a whole host of other reasons, self-promotion is a critical skill you need to hone. At this session, we will focus on how to creatively demonstrate your value without being transparent or offensive. We will wrestle with the elusive challenge of being a team player while also appropriately seeking recognition for your role. Attendees will leave this session with techniques unique to them to help them demonstrate their contribution and gain visibility as well as garner the recognition they both need and deserve.

6. Building a Happy Culture & Engagement in a Hybrid Workplace. We are in uncharted territory and many are wondering how to inspire a team, keep colleagues connected and build and sustain a meaningful culture while working a hybrid schedule. During this event, we will share recommendations and field questions on maintaining meaningful engagement and developing a strong community while working, at times, apart. Join us to learn success strategies for working remotely and deepening relationships to ensure your team is valued, invested and poised to build a thriving organization for today and the future.
